TO THE PUBLIC

Having decided to become my own Executor, I hereby offer 160 out of 600 pictures, which have been collected in America and Europe. Many are from old Philadelphia Estates.

My father, Col. Thomas Fitzgerald, was a noted Art Collector, and enjoyed personal acquaintance with many of the great artists of the world, Isabey, Fortuny, Meissonier, Rousseau, Vibert, Delacroix, Troyon, Bayard, Corot, Diaz, Jules Breton, Daubigny, Millet, Stuart, Peale, Sully (who painted our family 14 times), Neagle, Benj. West, Wyant, Innes, Abbey, etc., etc.

My brother, Riter Fitzgerald, was also a well-known Art Collector, and the critic of the "Philadelphia Item" and other prominent newspapers for 30 years.

"The Lord's Supper" and "Christ Crucified" my father and my brother considered two of the greatest pictures ever painted, not only as regards composition, which is masterly, but from the point of drawing, color scheme, and dramatic effect. They considered "The Lord's Supper" superior to the accepted picture by Da Vinci, the grouping of which is unnatural, for a supper party would hardly be seated only on one side of the table. It reminded them of a photographer's arrangement, and was unworthy the genius of a great artist. My picture has all the attributes; it is an inspiration.

I consider One Hundred Thousand Dollars a fair estimate of the value of "The Lord's Supper" and Fifty Thousand Dollars for "Christ Crucified,"

HARRINGTON FITZGERALD.

3 Pheasant Shooting in Belgium

A spirited picture by the greatest of the Belgium painters. The landscape is superb, while the figures, dog, rabbit and birds are capitally drawn and full of action. The color is brilliant without being obtrusive. This is one of Ten Kate's greatest examples, and is worthy a place in any first-class private or public gallery. The artist's pictures are difficult to get, and sell from $1,000 to $10,000 each. The younger brother, Herman Ten Kate, achieved distinction as a genre painter.

From the W. L. Elkins' sale.

Louise Gabriel Eugène Isabey, born in Paris, 1804, the son and pupil of Jean Baptiste Isabey, the miniature and portrait painter, was appointed, in 1830, Royal Marine Painter to the expedition to Algiers. His brilliant productions during and after this expedition established his career. He had won a first-class medal in 1824, been medaled again in 1827, and in 1832 was made a member of the Legion of Honor, and an officer in 1852. He was essentially a colorist, of the high romantic school, and whether in his marines or his figure subjects, was always a master hand. He died in Paris. | JAMES HAMILTON  | Deceased     |
| Acknowledged to be the greatest marine painter America has produced. Was a born genius and very eccentric. Made a large fortune through the sale of his pictures, but lost it through speculation. Spent several years in London, and was greatly impressed with Turner's pictures, and afterwards rivalled that great artist in the breadth and magnificence of his color effects. His pictures are in all the principal galleries and private collections, and are getting more valuable every year. Hamilton was born in 1819, and died in California in 1878. This marine is one of Hamilton's greatest pictures, showing his mastery of color and brilliancy of execution. It is a gem. |              |

This artist received a number of medals in Italy, from all its museums, and also distinctions from many foreign countries. At London Royal Academy, 1877, he exhibited "The Widow's Dinner," and in 1876 "Mother is Ill" and "The Bath." The Corcoran gallery at Washington owns his picture called "Fun and Fright." Another of his pictures is in the Gibson collection at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. This picture was shown at the last exhibition of the Union League and if a vote of those attending could have been taken, would certainly have received the largest number over any other picture.

DA VINCI

Deceased

151 The Lord's Supper

"The Lord's Supper" and "Christ Crucified" my father and my brother considered the two greatest pictures ever painted, not only as regards composition, which is masterly, but from the point of drawing, color scheme, and dramatic effect. They considered "The Lord's Supper" superior to the accepted picture by Da Vinci, the grouping of which is unnatural, for a supper party would hardly be seated only on one side of the table. It reminded them of a photographer's arrangement, and is unworthy of a great artist.
